PRICE $4 PER ANN. IN ADVANCE

TERMS OF THE POST.

THE BOSTON POST is published every morning, at No. 21, Water Street, Boston, by CHARLES G. GREENE, at four dollars per annum, payable in advance; four dollars and fifty cents, if paid within six months, or five dollars at the end of the year. These conditions will be rigidly adhered to.

CELEBRATION.

THE FRANKLIN TYPOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY celebrated its Anniversary, and the birth of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, at Concert Hall, on Saturday evening last. An able and interesting Address was delivered by Mr. THOMAS GILL, Jr., after which the company sat down to a sumptuous supper, prepared in Gen. Eaton's usually good style. After the removal of the cloth, the following toasts were drunk, enlivened at frequent intervals, with Songs, Glees and Catches, and the evening was spent in harmony and good feeling.

REGULAR TOASTS.

1. The Occasion.—May each annual return drive harder the quins which lock us in the chase of brotherly companionship; and stimulate us more closely to follow the copy of our great prototype, whose birth we commemorate.
 2. The President of the U. S.—Placed at the head of the Nation by the suffrages of the People, may patriotism be his guide, and the people's will his polar star.
 3. The Governor of the Commonwealth.—As a journeyman in the office of the Nation, he has been faithful—as foreman of a smaller establishment, may his measures be justified by an impartial rule.
 4. The Mayor of the City.—The work of his office will give good proof of the correctness of his case.
 5. The Constitution of the U. S.—Battered be the head that would dele a single letter.
 6. The Union.—The ambitious Devils who are trying to knock it into pi, will ere long discover that it is stereotyped.
 7. Congress.—May its pages never be thrown out of register by interlineations of political errors.
 8. George Washington.—Though his body is confined in the coffin, his spirit still hovers over his country to mark the errors of its work—Heaven forbid that it shall exhibit a foul proof. [Drank standing.]
 9. The Soldiers of the Revolution.—They leaped the solid columns of English, and made a fat job of it.
 10. The Army.—Old fashioned pressmen, who are prepared to pelt the forms of their enemies with balls till they beat a retreat.
 11. The Navy.—Whose stars and parallels point to a Nation, who will, having the power, press down all who would batter its rights, or break down the standard it has set up.
 12. Rats.—There be land rats and water rats, and rats now-a-days which Shakspeare wot not of.
 13. Woman.—A useful and ornamental work in nonpareil, agate, pearl and diamond, whose good impression upon the world is beyond measure. According to antique custom, every journeyman is entitled to a copy—and shall it not be embraced?
- VOLUNTEERS.
- By the President. The President of the U. S.—If he is determined to tip over the Bank, may he be smothered by its contents, old quins, (coins) scraps of paper, &c. deposits made by the devil.
- By the Vice President. The memory of the late ISAIAH THOMAS—the first benefactor of our Society.
- Mr. Thomas Gill, after a few remarks respecting the persecutions to which the editors and printers of Paris had been subjected by the French Government, gave—
- Louis Philippe: Who after ratting his cousin out of his situation as foreman of France, attempted to gouge the workmen, by allowing them only two-thirds of the fat of the Charter—may his throne prove to be a lean take, his form be battered on the guillotine, and the devil distribute the pi.
- By Albin Beard. Daniel Webster:—We look to the wide measure of his patriotism, the correctness of his principles, and his imposing eloquence to justify and look up the squabbled pages of the National form.
- By T. J. Lillie. The Foreman of the Nation:—Though he found a good substitute for balls in the use of a proclamation, he will find that he cannot throw off good work without a bank.
- By George Amerige. The U. S. Bank:—Its coins are locked up, and its Foreman out of sorts—a bad case for the journeymen, and foul proof against the Master.
- By Alfred Beard, Editor of the N. H. Telegraph. The Printers of Boston:—Enlightened, free, independent.
- By Benjamin P. Hammond. The birth day of Franklin, the Printer and Philosopher:—May we always keep a register of his rules, that nothing is cheap which we do not need, and that a penny saved is a penny earned.
- By Ebenezer Smith. Peter Edes, the worthy member of our profession:—Although his case is "old and poor," may his form never suffer for the want of quins.
- By Gearfield Learned. Matrimony:—May it never become a mere matter of money, and may those of us who are locked in that chase, always be blessed with smiles to "chase dull care away" from our firesides.
- By Charles B. Dennett. Our Country:—A large and beautiful form of twenty-four, locked up in the chase of mutual interest without a cross bar—should one page drop out, the others would fall into pi.
- By James B. Clinton. Our Orator:—A fair title to a good work—may his composition be locked up in the hearts of his companions, as a guide to follow copy.
- By Jacob A. Smith. Benjamin Franklin:—He that was among the diamond font of 1706—he that was among the cannon of '75—he that first brought lightning from the Heavens and bottled it up—he that would not eat fish till he had seen them eat one another—may his name never be erased from history's record, nor his imprint grow pale in the hearts of those who follow his profession.
- By George Amerige. Our New Mayor: The People's shooting stick, with which they will drive caving hypocrisy into—the old shoe.
- By a Member. The Orator of the Evening: In doing justice to the members of the Society, he has very gently taken by the Gill those who have not yet signed our Constitution.
- By a Member. The Printing Committee of the U. S. Bank:—The next time they lock a form up, we hope they will shoot a few quins into the drawers of the jouts.

By a Member. Our Musical Guests:—They are clean music composers, and have distributed their notes in the right box—may a kiss from the printer's daughter reward them for their song.

By a Member. France and America:—The former dressed her Legislative halls in mourning on the death of the American Philosopher, Franklin—the latter welcomed with a Nation's gratitude, the French Patriot and Statesman, Lafayette.

By a Member. The good feeling of the present company—To be continued.

* Besides other subjects deeply interesting to the members of the Society, the Address contained a just and eloquent tribute to the memory of the late ROBERT WALLACE McNAIR.

STENOGRAPHIC GLIMPSES OF CONGRESS.
No. LXII.

Washington, Saturday, Jan. 18, 1834.—Before Mr. Rives commenced his speech yesterday, Mr. Poindexter made a short, animated one on the "distress" of the West, the fall of cotton, the difficulty of making sales, &c. He is a very able debater, when animated with his subject; and it will be in vain to deny him talents; for he made the very best and ablest speech in favor of Gen. Jackson, on the Seminole question, in 1819—20, (I think) that was delivered on that subject in Congress. He is something of a satirist as well as humorist; but a man of sense on all subjects, and constantly at his post.

After he had taken his seat, there was quite an amusing, and very dramatic incident took place. Col. Benton, as a sort of reply to his speech, begged to read a letter just received from New Orleans, dated Dec. 29, which he remarked was from a very respectable source. He did not feel at liberty to communicate the name to the Senate; but asked Mr. Wagman, (handing him the letter) if he knew the signature; he replied he did. Upon which Mr. Poindexter asked if the writer was not the President of some pet Bank? The Col. replied, he was not able to say; perhaps the gentleman himself might know; and he sent the letter to him, which Mr. Poindexter just glanced at, saying, with a smile, he "thought so." It was Mr. P's brother-in-law; as a gentleman informed me, who had seen the letter. Col. B. taking back the letter, remarked, that the writer was not only respectable, but well allied; and then proceeded to read the contents. The powerful points were, that the Branch, at New Orleans, refused all accommodation; established a rule not to discount any drafts from the West or South; but to discount all drafts they could purchase from Philadelphia and North of there.

After this, Mr. Webster moved that Mr. Clay's Resolution, be laid on the table, signifying that he intended to make some remarks upon it on Monday. Mr. Clay said he was anxious to have it finally disposed of by Monday. Mr. Rives, however, rose, remarking, that he desired to speak to the subject; and as his desk was quite clear, and exhibited neither "notes of preparation," books nor documents, nor any sign of a set speech, the knowing ones, who look out for signs, were quite taken by surprise, when he had uttered a few words, to find he was commencing a splendid exordium.

He first alluded to the embarrassment of his situation, his State having departed from those principles which they sent him there to maintain. He then spoke of the commercial distress; and said it was important first to learn the cause, and then seek the remedy. He warned the Senate against mistaking a symptom for the disease, and making the remedy worse by the remedy. It was more deeply seated than the mover of the Resolutions supposed; and might require the cautery and the knife. It was caused, he feared, by a chartered prerogative, a monied monopoly, exercising a fatal influence on the State Banks, and sitting like an incubus, upon the energies of the country. He quoted Mr. Jefferson's sentiments against a National Bank, "its deadly hostility to the nation." It dictates to the government; in vain had the gentleman from Kentucky warned us against the institution; [he was opposed to the charter] but our experience has brought us to a concurrence with his former opinions. The Bank had not stood still, as the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Poindexter) had said, it had retrograded in the hour of distress, only to increase it.

He spoke of the public deposits, and asked how their removal could have caused the distress, when there were times when they had been reduced to nothing, and yet there was no complaint of distress; that there was less than $2,000 at the time the bill was vetoed (as I understood him) and yet the Bank was able to increase and extend its loans. When the Bank curtailed their loans ten millions, the Bank curtailed their loans ten millions!

He said that an eloquent and distinguished gentleman in the other House (Binney) did not ascribe the distress to the "removal," but to the manner, the doctrine of it. But he shew that the Bank might still have continued its loans; and referring to authentic documents, shew that the annual operations of the Bank had been 341 millions, and deduced from the fact, that when the Bank chose to withhold their loans, or press for payment, it was in their power at all times to produce distress and consternation.

Having gone thus far, I feel that I am doing the Speaker injustice by attempting to give you the outlines of his argument. It will depend upon the incidents of Monday whether I shall continue to follow him, as I have done, obscurely through his splendid oratory. I took but a few imperfect hints of his speech, for the manner and matter were so fascinating, I could only listen and admire, without being able to pencil hardly an outline of his course.

REIS EFFENDI.

Stock Market.—The Daily Advertiser gives a statement of the former and present rates of certain Rail Road Stocks in the New York market, to show the extensive pressure for money. This, to those unacquainted with the true character of this kind of stock-jobbing, is calculated to make a false impression. These rail road stocks, are known in the market as "fancy stocks," owned principally by men without much capital,—they are unproductive, because the works are unfinished,—and generally liable to further assessments. The brokers and stock-jobbers, who have run them up during the period when interest was low, now find in the market floating paper, which may be taken at high rates of interest, and compensates them for a sacrifice on their rail road stock. Others again who have taken large parcels of stocks on which they never were able to pay, and never intended to pay assessments, are now compelled to sell. The fall, however, in the nominal value of the stocks, as that was altogether fanciful, does not affect its intrinsic worth. The prices of the great staples of the country are the best test of the money market, and if we look to these, their general average paid is as high as last year. Do our citizens find provisions in the market, or necessities at the groceries, lower than formerly?

The Boston Courier admits that the tendency of the Legislative investigation gotten up by the Bank party, "is to INCREASE THE PRESSURE AND ADD DISTRESS TO EMBARRASSMENT"—this is true—and will the people of this city countenance men in an attempt to distress them, for the purpose of pleasing Nicholas Biddle?

Miss Kemble in Washington.—Our correspondent, Reis Effendi, concludes his letter of the 16th, as follows:—

As I have allowed the hour of the closing of the mail to pass by, out of my sovereign will and pleasure, and, meantime, claimed the control over the "deposits" of my own "purse" for dissipation—I think it but a fair "bonus," that I should render you an account of my stewardship. I have been to see Fanny Kemble (Fanny, dearest, my heart is thine!) and her father, ennet Marianna and Julian St. Pierre, in the Wife of Mania. The house was packed as close as a barrel of pork; but it was all No 1, notwithstanding there was an elegant proportion of ribs! Fanny did her facinorated, and all the house fainting when poor Julian was stabbed in his tunick. The audience was like a galvanic battery—and there was not a thrill of sensation that did not electrify the whole. We took a family box—the best and biggest in the theatre, next but one to the stage, only for part of a private family of fourteen! and permitted some acquaintances by special grace to join us; so that we numbered something more than a score. Yea, a score, Dr Webster; the word is not obsolete, notwithstanding it is in the Bible. And be it remembered, our box was the most brilliant in the theatre, having no less than a dozen diamonds of youth and beauty, and fashion; and to add to its brilliancy, the flower of Florida, Miss Walton, moved in her radiant orbit next to us; as well as several Virginia gems of rare lustre. And to distinguish our box still more, a worthy friend of mine, must needs fold his cloak up, nineteen double, and sit upon it—though he is six feet four and a quarter—that he might look up to Mr Blair, of South Carolina, who sat in the pit! All the beauty and fashion of the city was present; several of the Heads of Departments, and many of the Foreign Ambassadors, and their suits; Mr Barry, McLane, Mr Vaughn, Mons Serurier, &c. &c. The lady of the latter, a beautiful woman, was pointed out to me; and I heard from the next box an interesting anecdote of her. She was a native of the West Indies; and when an insurrection and massacre took place in her native Island, her surpassing beauty, when she was yet a mere child, induced the slaves to spare the lives of her family. So you see, though beauty (and "booty") has sometimes caused wars—instance Helen, of Troy, and Dermot McMorogh's mistress of Ireland—yet it has sometimes staid the hand of the murderer, as in the case of Pocahontas, and the lady of the French Ambassador.

As I have got to love and murder, I might as well stop; so, good night.

Six Degrees of Crime.—Mr Hill's new Drama continues to draw good houses, and still elicits the most unqualified approbation. We remember no piece produced in Boston within the last ten years, which has made so decided an impression as the Six Degrees of Crime. The play is attractive on account of its combination of exciting incidents, with a good moral, a well conducted plot, natural situation of the dramatis personae, and neat, sprightly and effective dialogue. The whole of the first act is lively and bustling; and the arrangement by which Louise falls into the hands of her seducer, Julio, is managed with a good deal of skill. In the second and third divisions, under the titles of Women and Gambling, we are introduced to two of the most brilliant and elegant scenes we ever witnessed on the stage. We speak now not so much of the theatrical decorations, (though they were worthy of much praise) as of the spirit that infused into the several parts by the members of the company. In these two acts there are a great variety of minor characters essential to the story, which are admirably sustained by Mrs. Pelly, Mrs Conway, Miss Lane and other ladies of the corps. Nor should we omit, in this enumeration, the gentlemanly conductor of the Roulette table, whose coolness on the entrance of the Police to examine his premises, and sang froid when the unfortunate gamster blows out his brains, were certainly very praiseworthy and amusing.

Madame Doucet was rendered in a most striking manner by Mrs Asbury; and the Julio Dornally of Mr Hill gave him a fine opportunity of displaying powers which we did not before believe he possessed. His scene in which he strangles Louise, and that in which he escapes from the guillotine and is stabbed by the mysterious Michael, were excellent specimens of natural acting.

We perceive by his card, that the manager in consequence of its great success, announces the Six Degrees for representation every night for the present.

The Manager of the Tremont Theatre offers an attractive bill of fare for this evening. The "Man in the Moon," and the "Wood Demon." The former is a very amusing affair, possessing considerable merit, and the latter, also, is well spoken of.

Great Gale at Buffalo.—Between four and five o'clock, on the afternoon of the 12th inst. the city of Buffalo was visited by a severe gale of wind, which continued unabated until near daylight the next morning, blowing down chimneys, unroofing buildings, &c. &c. to a great extent. The water rose to a great height, and many of the streets were completely blocked with ice. The oldest inhabitants cannot recollect a gale of equal severity.

The present Messenger to the Governor and Council, was formerly a printer in this city, and His Honor Lieut Gov Armstrong, was his apprentice and served his time out in his employ. He relinquished his business here and went to Worcester, where he printed and published the Worcester Spy, then edited by His Excellency Gov. Davis.—Trans.

Yesterday afternoon, in a house on the Bridge Road, near the falls of Schuylkill, a woman was killed by the discharge of a gun in her husband's hands. The man, we are informed, declares that the shot was fired accidentally, while his wife was behind him, and the gun thrown over his shoulder.—Philad. paper.

The large Elephant, lamed two or three months ago, while landing from the ship which brought him to this country, marched up Eighth street yesterday evening, at the rate of five miles an hour, cheered by the shouts of a thousand boys.—Ibid.

A Georgia editor complains that such is the intensity of the cold in that quarter, that he is compelled to write with his gloves on. Poor fellow!

The river at Pittsburg was twenty feet above low water mark on Wednesday last.

The Governor of South Carolina has offered a reward of 300 dollars for the apprehension of James and Charles Ray, engaged in the murder of James Harrelson.

Anything for Money.—A man in Cincinnati recently lost his life, in attempting to swallow a watch on a wager.

POLICE COURT.

Presumptive evidence, no proof.—John Shaw, who has been the rounds of our receptacles for villains, was yesterday examined upon a charge of breaking into Nichols & Whitney's store, on the night of the 13th inst and stealing shell combs and nutmegs to the value of about $200. He was suspected in consequence of two letters, which he had dropped in the store, signed "J. Shaw." Several persons were on the look out for him, and on Monday evening Messrs Moses Hemmenway and William Bemis stopped him on Central wharf. He denied that his name was Shaw, but upon searching his hat a letter was found addressed to him, by his brother.

Capt Robbins, keeper of the House of Correction, testified that Shaw had recently been discharged from there, and that both of the individuals to whom the letters signed "J. Shaw" were directed, were still there, the woman being employed in the kitchen. She was committed for being a common drunkard. He stated, however, that Shaw could write four distinct hands, and therefore he could not positively identify the letters found in the store, as his hand writing. The prisoner was accordingly discharged.

The letters are somewhat of a curiosity, and prove that a rogue may have a "soul to feel and a heart to love," as well as "Master Arthur." Few would suppose that the tender plant of love could thrive under the rude culture of a prison, and the ever vigilant glances of the keeper. But Coleridge has beautifully said, in one of his most exquisite pieces—"This Lime Tree Bower my Prison"—

No scene so narrow, but may well employ
Each faculty of sense, and keep the heart
Awake to love and beauty.

It is true he restricts this beneficent provision of Nature, exclusively to the "wise and pure." But this only shows his ignorance of the world—a necessary qualification in a poet—it being the province of poetic geniuses to discover ideal truth, and for practical philosophers like us to apply it "to men's business and bosoms."

We have seen the "respected Miss Ann Rosewaine"—the object of Johnny's flame—and cannot commend his taste, though we respect his fidelity. Perhaps, however, she did not then appear to good advantage, as it was in the Police Court, where

"No rival beauty kept alive her pride."

The letter to the damsel is as follows:—
"Respected Miss,—I avail myself of this opportunity of writing a few lines to you, letting you know where I am, and what I am about—I am under circumstances of good health and good spirits—I have let myself to Mr Central wharf—I don't want you to let any one know where I am, or what I am doing—I have understood that Woods tried to hurt me since I have come away—I wish you would let me know the particulars about what he is trying to do—I shall fix him shortly. I am, with respect, your sincere lover. Please answer the first opportunity."
J. SHAW.

The other letter is addressed to a brother convict—"Mr Arlin"—in which our swain appears in a diplomatic character—a plenipotentiary to his Excellency the "Governor, and his Council." But even amidst these deep matters, between the "high contracting parties," his ever watchful tenderness for the gentle Ann betrays itself:—

"Mr Arlin,—Sir—I have been to see Mr —, he says he has presented your petition to the Governor, and his Council, and is now awaiting their result. You must keep Ann in good spirits. I send you some paper, and you must give Ann some."
I am, with respect, yours,
J. SHAW.

When it is recollected that Miss Rosewaine was sent into imprisonment for drinking, the request to have her kept "in good spirits," is very appropriate. None but a true lover, would thus have consulted her taste.

Besides the above letters, there was found a little nullifying news paper, entitled "The Southern Rose-Bud," printed in South Carolina, on which he had inscribed the name of his deary.

P. S.—Shaw was re-arrested yesterday afternoon, and some of the combs, &c. found. No further examination, however, took place.

MASSACHUSETTS LEGISLATURE.

Wednesday, Jan. 22.—In the Senate, no business of interest was transacted.

In the House, an order of Mr Phillips of Sturbridge, for inquiry into the state of the Banks, and whether any Bank has taken, directly or indirectly more than 1 per cent. interest, or owes more than double the capital actually paid in, with powers to send for persons and papers, was laid on the table. Report, that it is inexpedient to legislate on the subject of reducing the House of Representatives, was read once and passed to a second reading. The memorials, &c. in relation to Masonry were committed to Messrs Whitney of Deerfield, Allen of Worcester, and Heman Lincoln of Boston. Mr Baker of Amherst, presented an order for inquiry whether wild and waste lands should not be taxed at two per cent. instead of six per cent. as heretofore. Bill concerning County Commissioners was taken up and discussed, but before any question was taken thereon the House adjourned.

Maine up and doing.—Resolutions have been introduced into the Maine Legislature, bringing the subject of the U. S. Bank before that body. The vote on the postponement of the order for that purpose, (103 to 43) though the House was not by any means full, shows sufficiently that the majority in favor of the National Administration, on this subject, is overwhelming.

National Convention.—At a large meeting of the Democratic Republicans of the Northern Liberties, Philadelphia, held on the 16th inst. it was

Resolved, That in the opinion of this meeting, a National Convention composed of delegates from each congressional district, presents at once the most practicable and the most republican mode of effecting a nomination; and that under the peculiar circumstances which exist at present, the expedient of a caucus must fail of accomplishing its only legitimate object, the concentration and success of the Democratic party.

The inhabitants of Hallowell and Augusta, Me. talk of uniting the two towns and making a city of them.

Important to Publishers.—Mr B. Brewster, printer, of Concord, N. H. has invented a new method of lettering and gilding books, which will save to publishers, at least one hundred thousand dollars per year, if adopted, in this city. Specimens can be seen by calling on Mr B. at No 2, Morton place.

A Bass Voice.—Some years ago a celebrated bass singer was informed that a man who lived about one hundred miles off possessed a deeper voice than he did. Resolved to ascertain the fact, he posted off, and found the object of his pursuit digging in his garden.—After observing him for some time, he called out to him in his very lowest notes, "Good day, to you, sir," on which the other answered in notes four or five degrees lower, "Your servant, sir." The vocalist was perfectly satisfied, turned his horse's head, and retraced his steps homewards.

Foreign Miscellany.

A bookseller of Maestricht has lately been subjected to divers criminal prosecutions, for a circumstance which appears to have been totally accidental. He had placed in his window, portraits of the Prince of Orange and Prince Frederic, while the space between them was occupied by the work of M. Jacob, the bibliophilist, entitled "The Two Fools." A great disturbance was made about the matter by the military authorities, and though the poor bookseller protested his innocence, and brought proofs of his having always been a loyal and discreet subject, it has been near costing him his entire business.

Epigram from the Anthology.—On a Man with a Long Nose.
Simo can never blow his nose,
He cannot get his fingers near it;
Sneezing, no sign of grace he shows,
The sound is too far off to hear it.

A mad Princess of the house of Bourbon, on being asked why the reigns of queens were, in general, more prosperous than the reigns of kings, replied, "Because under kings, women govern—under queens, men."

Master and Valet.—Count Mirabeau, brother of the celebrated orator of the Constituent Assembly, known by the name of Mirabeau Jonnean (cask), one morning desired his valet de chambre to come to him. "You are a faithful and zealous servant," said the count: "I can but congratulate myself in having a servant who so fully performs his duty, but I am about to dismiss you." "And for what reason, your lordship?" "Because you always get drunk the same day that I do." "And is that my fault, my lord, when you get drunk every day?" The count could find no reply to this reasoning, and kept his valet de chambre.

There is an anecdote told of Charles Cotton, the burlesque poet, which seems to show that his vein of humor could not restrain itself on any consideration. It appears that in consequence of a single couplet in his Virgil Træstie, in which he has made mention of a particular kind of ruff worn by a grandmother of his who lived in the Peak, he lost an estate of £400 per annum. The old lady, whose humor and testy disposition he could by no means have been a stranger to, was never able to forgive the liberty he had taken with her; and having her fortune whittled at her own disposal, although she had previously made him her sole heir, she altered her will, and gave away the whole estate to an absolute stranger.

Cure for the tooth-ache.—One day last week, a person at Bunbury, afflicted with the tooth-ache, had the faulty member extracted. A short time afterwards, he replaced it in the gum, where it has grown quite firm again; and he is now able to use it as well as ever, without suffering the least pain!—Birmingham Advertiser.

Death Extraordinary in Dublin.—Died, on Oct. the 9th, the Dublin Times. Grief for the departure of the late Viceroy, the Marquess of Anglesey, to whom it was indebted for existence and support, is considered to have been the immediate cause of its death.—Here is an epitaph.

Here lies, alas! the Dublin Times,
As famed for its reason as for its rhymes:
We are sorry to say, 'twill never more be able
To shake our sides at the breakfast-table.
